Dudley Field Malone at Kingston Trust Banquet

Famous Lawyer Who Featured at Scopes Trial Delivers Eloquent Address, Embracing Modern Topics at Fourth Annual Banquet Held at the Governor Clinton Hotel—Banking Methods in the Orient Explained by Edward T. Stelle, Jr.—Philip Elting Hears of His Success as Collector of Port of New York.

An address by Dudley Field Malone was a delightful surprise that featured the fourth annual dinner of the directors and employes of the Kingston Trust Company, held in The Governor Clinton Hotel Wednesday evening. Mr. Malone hit the high spots in giving his views of the trend of the times, intelligent selfishness as the mainspring of right progress, true Americanism, America's place in the world and freedom to teach the truth. As the toastmaster and the other speakers, like Mr. Malone, had something to say, said it and knew when to stop, there was plenty of time for dancing after the formal program ended. The music was by Paul Zucca's orchestra and the menu was as follows:

Anchovy Canapes.
Celery Hearts. Queen Olives.
Almonds Sale.
Cream of Tomato, a la Espenade.
Broiled Kingston Point Shad,
Maitre d'Hotel.
Parisienne Potatoes.
Roast Native Capon,
Chestnut Dressing.
Rissolee Potatoes.
Cauliflower in Cream. Petit Pois.
Lettuce and Tomato Salad,
Russian Dressing.
Fresh Strawberry Ice Cream.
Petit Fours.
Demi Tasse.
Sweet Cider. After Dinner Mints.
Cigars. Cigaretts.

Philip Elting, president of the Trust Company, opened the speech-making period with a few words of welcome and the introduction of John W. Eckert as the toastmaster.

Exciting Expectancy.

Mr. Eckert got off to a good start by promising a real feature a little later when, he said, a committee would have a bath tub brought in and another committee, whose names he gave, would hold the cloak and things would happen just as they do in New York. To the great disappointment of many, these committees failed to act.

Experiences in China.

The first speaker on the program was Edward T. Stelle, Jr., son of Dr. L. K. Stelle and grandson of the late Dr. Jacob D. Wurts. Mr. Stelle has spent several years in Shanghai, China, connected with the International Banking Corporation. He gave a delightful informal account of some of his experiences in the Orient and described some of the queer customs of the Chinese. Accounting is made burdensome by the fact that there are two systems of currency, taels and dollars that are interlocked. A man may deposit in dollars and check out in taels, or the reverse. The detailed accounting and the actual handling of money during the business day is done by natives, Eurasians and various mixed breeds who work for from $15 to $50 a month. Wealthy men work in the bank and allow their poorer relatives to run their private business because working in the bank gives the native "plenty face," which means prestige and standing in the community.

Mr. Stelle gave a description of social life among the 35,000 whites in a city of 2,000,000, of the hospitals, fine hotels, clubs and recreation grounds, the volunteer army of 5,000 whites organized for protection in time of trouble and of many other things of interest.

Some Trust Company Activities.

Judge James Jenkins, counsel for the Trust Company, was the next speaker. He spoke of the good fortune of the Trust Company in having a president who could bring about desirable results and of the success of the Trust Company in doing things that many said could not be done. Banking has change greatly in the past 25 years. There is still the impersonal element made necessary by the precision required in accounting, but there has grown up with this a human element of service to the community. The bank now helps those going abroad to obtain passports, makes hotel reservations for them, gives information concerning investments, cares for trust funds and does many other useful, human things. Banking is up with the times.

Malone Distributes Compliments.

Dudley Field Malone of New York, former assistant secretary of state, former collector of the port of New York, international lawyer, and counsel for the defense in the Scopes trial, was next introduced. After congratulating Kingston on its new hotel, complimenting the architecture of the building especially the beautified Colonial front, commending Mr. Elting for his good taste in spending worthy coin at home and expressing his highest commendation of the effective and intelligent administration of the office of collector of the port and assuring that Mr. Elting is held in highest regard by the 5,000 men and women under him, Mr. Malone said that the present administration of the collectorship was the most humane and effective New York had ever had.

The Machine Age.

Making frequent trips abroad, the speaker said that every time he returned he felt happier that he was an American citizen. This is a machine age, not a political era. There may be a few local exceptions, such as in Ulster county, but even here, though politics prevail the machine is applied. The foreign policy of the United States is to be worked out through recognition of the fact that this is a machine and not a political age. It was a Ford car that conveyed King Feisel to his throne. While it used to be said that the sun never sets on the flag of England it is now equally true that the sun never sets on the Ford car. (At this stage of the proceedings Director John R. Millard was observed to be visibly swelling.)

America Must Be Practical.

While Henry Ford may not know whether America was discovered by Harrison or Columbus or whether Shakespeare was written by Bacon or wrote Bacon, he thinks and acts in terms of the age of machinery in which we live. It is economic power that is behind life at home and abroad. Mere politics is no longer powerful. America must not let its great heart run to sentimentality. We gave $11,000,000 to the allies and spent $22,000,000 more in the war. It cannot be said of us, in the light of this, that we have no soul. The uninformed foreign visitor who makes a short trip and then lectures on America, the Americans who seek favor and notice in society abroad, must not be allowed to color our opinions. We must be willing to cooperate in any useful scheme for world peace, but with foreign powers still doing all the things they did that brought on the World War, we are justified in requiring evidence that they will submit to the mandates of a league. When they have given this evidence it will be time enough for us to take part.

Stand by Our Country.

It is self interest, honest and wise self interest, not more humitarianism, that makes for success. There must be an interest and a stake and ambition and purpose on the part of Americans in their own country. Englishmen, however bitterly they disagree on methods or on questions of the day, are still Englishmen, loyal to their country. We should be like them. Americans all of the time, standing by our country, unc ringing, unafraid, helping to solve the problems of the world.

In speaking of the youth of the day, Mr. Malone said he had no fear of the things criticised by many. The flapper is no worse than her grandmother was. She is honest and healthy and an asset to the world.

Truth Should be Told.

We now have bootleg liquids and soon we will have to bootleg knowledge if those who seek to restrict education have their way. The truth should be told. The young will separate truth from error and reach conclusions. To teach the truths of science is not to destroy religion. Moses never heard of the telephone or the radio and if we are to be restricted to the laws laid down by Moses, taken literally, and bar out the incalculable revelations made through science we will bar true religion. These revelations are nothing but greater evidence of God, made by every revelation to appear for a Deity than the fathers were able to conceive. Scientific progress is a revelation of power and to say that it conflicts with religion is to say that God is not true. We must be free from the dictation of any sect or dogma. We must uphold the spirit of the constitution which was framed with the thought in mind that the conception of religion held by even one citizen must not be transgressed against.

After a few words of appreciation by President Elting and some apologies by Mr. Treadwell for failure to produce the bathtub, the room was cleared of tables and dancing began.

Partition Action In Russell Estate

Suit Involves Settlement of Estate of the late Fred T. Russell, Who Died Intestate—Signed Deeds in Presence of Notary But Not Filed Until After His Death.

A partition action brought by Garret M. Russell against Jeremiah Russell, et al., of Saugerties, was taken up for trial in Supreme court Wednesday afternoon. The action involves the settlement of the estate of the late Fred T. Russell who died suddenly on October 21, 1924, at the old Russell homestead in Saugerties. Mr. Russell was 83 years old and had been in good health. He was found dead in his home where he resided alone. No will was found. At the time of his death he owned five pieces of property, or five pieces of property were in his possession.

He died intestate and the four sons and two daughters have since joined in selling one of the pieces of property. The question now before the court is whether at the time of his death he did own all of the property in his possession or whether certain of it had not become the property of his heirs through deeds signed by him in the presence of a notary but never filed prior to his death. The defendants claim that two of the pieces of property had been transferred by deed to certain of them prior to his death although the deeds had never been filed with the county clerk. Plaintiff contends that the transfer was never made since the deeds had not been filed and therefore the transaction had never been completed at the time of death.

Property and Questions Involved.

The two pieces of property upon which the heirs cannot agree are the Russell block on Main and Market streets in the village of Saugerties and the homestead property on the river.

After the death of Fred T. Russell there were found three deeds. The deeds were found the day after his death sealed in an envelope in the safe. They were later filed and the question now before the court is whether the deeds had been legally delivered and were they valid at the time of death or was the transaction still open and uncompleted.

The defendants claim that on May 8, 1919, the Russell block was sold to three of the defendants, Mrs. Benn, Jeremiah and William F. Russell. This deed was one of those found after death. The other two deeds transferred the homestead property. One transferred to Mrs. Benn and Anna Russell and the other transferred it to Mrs. Benn. It is the contention of the plaintiff that the persons named in the deeds had never seen these deeds prior to the death of their father and that the deeds are not valid as they were filed after death and therefore the transaction was completed after the death of Fred T. Russell.

Distributed Part of Estate.

The six children surviving are Garrett M. Russell, who is plaintiff in the action, and Jeremiah Russell, Mrs. Benn, William F., Ralph, and Anna Russell. Anna resides in Anna Russell. Anna resides in Syracuse and Ralph at Endicott. The other four children reside at Saugerties. The contention of the defendants, represented by John W. Eckert is that there was made a distribution of part of the property prior to the death of Fred T. Russell and that the plaintiff was given a deed to property in Saugerties and that he also purchased a business in Saugerties for a nominal sum. The defendants claim that he was cared for in that way and that the deeds to the property were made to provide for them.

The defendants ask for a verdict sustaining the deeds by declaring them valid. William F. Russell and Garrett M. Russell, the eldest son, were appointed administrators of the estate of their father.

Palmer Canfield appears for plaintiff and John W. Eckert for the defendants.

Carroll Guilty Of Perjury on Bathtub Count

Jury Finds Earl Carroll Guilty of Perjuring Himself When He Testified No Dancer Plunged Nude Into Bathtub Full of Liquor.

New York, May 27.—Earl Carroll, theatrical producer, was found guilty by a jury today of perjuring himself when he testified that no dancer plunged nude into a bath-tub full of liquor during the Washington birthday party on the stage of his theatre.

The jury decided he did not commit perjury when he testified before the grand jury that no liquor was served.

"This charge of perjury," Judge Goddard said, "is not to be treated lightly. Perjury must not be tolerated if grand juries are to continue to carry on their important purposes. Here, of all places, truth must prevail.

"If you find that Mr. Carroll lied, whether or not he lied like a gentleman is not material. The law makes no distinction between such falsehoods and the common variety."

The jury took one hour and one minute to reach its verdict. It retired at 11:15 and returned at 12:16.

Herbert C. Smythe, attorney for Carroll, immediately asked that the verdict be set aside as against the weight of evidence and the law. Judge Henry W. Goddard, who has heard the entire proceedings, denied the motion.

Smythe then requested that sentence be deferred for one week, which Judge Goddard consented to. Carroll will be sentenced on Thursday next.

United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner, who has prosecuted the case, asked that the bail be set at $10,000, but Judge Goddard ruled $5,000 was sufficient.

Under the law, Judge Goddard has the option of imposing a heavy fine on the theatrical producer, or sentencing him to five years in the federal penitentiary on each of the two counts.

The Sussin children left the car and the dog suddenly turned on the other little girl and bit her in the face. The girl was taken to the office of Dr. Mambert on Broadway for treatment. The child was stopping with Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Balestieri at 348 Broadway.

Rather "Near" Relative

A Chicago woman gave a relative a box of expensive stationery. The following Christmas the relative asked her to buy it back, offering to sell it for half she paid for it. He explained he preferred a paper with lines and that he was giving her the opportunity to buy a nice gift for some one else at a reduced price. We are reminded of the story of a little boy who has just asked his mother what a near relative is. The Chicago man was a "near" relative.—Exchange.

Indians Grow Popcorn

The leaders of plant industry says that popcorn and sweet corn, as well as field corn, were grown by the Indians at the time of the discovery of America.

CLUB IS FOUND IN PUBLICITY

Newspaper Real "Big Stick" in Traffic Safety Work, Says Graham.

"Constructive newspaper publicity has been one of the important factors in bettering traffic in New York," said George M Graham, chairman of the traffic planning and safety committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

"It has pilloried the careless driver.

"It has published the names of those whose licenses were revoked or suspended.

"Credit, to be sure, cannot be allocated to one source.

Praise Is Due.

"Charles A. Harnett, motor vehicle commissioner, is deserving of great praise in the reduction which has come about during his administration.

"He has enforced the law rigorously.

"He has had a good law supporting him.

"He has had intelligent backing in various municipalities.

"The combination of these elements in removing the reckless driver from the highway, plus the activity of the newspapers in publishing these lists, is, we believe, one of the most helpful demonstrations in the progress of traffic control.

"Persecution of the careless driver, however deserved, would tend to bring a reaction

"But the calm, constructive attitude of the press in simply publishing the facts, listing the persons who have lost their licenses is, I believe, one of the most potent measures that can be used.

"It is hard to enforce jail sentences and in a large city traffic lines do not have much news value. But the drivers of communities have food for sober thought when they see several hundred of their neighbors listed for revocation of licenses.

"Nobody on that list receives sympathy. The average motorist will take particular care to keep off that list.

Licenses Revoked.

"But there are other states where revocation of licenses is in effect and where tremendous, constructive effort has been exerted, without avail, to bring about reductions.

"Such cases need special analysis by the persons in charge. It may be that only a few newspapers are publishing the revocation lists. It may be that there are a number of danger places on the state highways that are causing accidents, even when the drivers are careful. There may be inadequate police patrol to check up on recklessness.

"Certain it is, that if New York state with its great number of cities, its large foreign population and its great volume of tourist traffic can reduce accidents, the work of other communities earnestly working on this will in time be rewarded."

Distilled Water Quite Essential for Battery

Distilled water is, of course, absolutely essential for the storage battery. It is not always possible to procure this easily and any car owner can make his own distilled water by means of a very simple apparatus. Have a length of annealed copper tubing coiled, so that it will fit in a dishpan. Connect the end of the copper tubing with an ordinary tea kettle by means of a short piece of rubber tubing. The other end of the tube is curved so that the water passing down will drip into a bottle or other container. The dishpan in which the coil rests is filled with cold water, frequently renewed to keep it cold. The water in the tea kettle is boiled and the steam so produced passes out of the spout into the tube, through the coil, where it is cooled and condensed back into water again and is finally collected for use in the bottle at the end of the copper line.

Pedestrians Responsible for Many Auto Accidents

By W. H. Cameron, Managing Director, National Safety Council, Chicago.

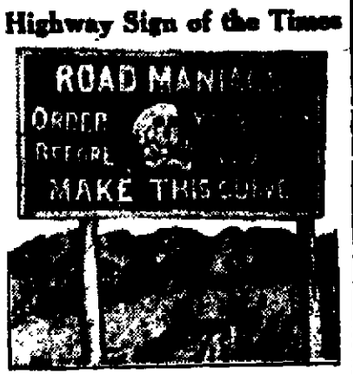
Pedestrians are responsible for a great many automobile accidents. Some of them need guardians to escort them across the streets. Too many jay walkers ramble about without restraint, crossing thoroughfares where it is most convenient for them to do so, getting in the way of motorists who have the right of way and generally clogging up traffic. Very often motorists have to suddenly pull into curbs to avoid striking jay walkers, endangering their own lives and property, only to be greeted with unkind words by the thoughtless pedestrians. One wonders what these careless people are thinking about when they walk in front of fast-moving traffic, without stopping, looking or listening.

Too many pedestrians do not appreciate their own responsibility but place it all on motorists. To educate them is one of our tasks, a problem that faces every safety advocate actively engaged in accident prevention work. Pedestrian traffic must be standardized and the sooner it is done the better it will be for the nation. There should be uniform laws for pedestrians just as many communities have standard traffic regulations for motorists. The burden of responsibility should not be placed upon either the motorist or the pedestrian alone, for if this is done the other will run wild. It is just as important to teach the pedestrian to keep from being hit as it is to educate the motorist from striking him. In other words, what is needed is sort of a motorist-pedestrian partnership.

It is more important for the pedestrian to be careful than for the motorist, for it is usually the pedestrian who is injured in an automobile accident. Of the 21,000 men, women and children killed by automobiles during 1925 two-thirds were pedestrians.

Death is so permanent!

Highway Sign of the Times



The residents of Parowan, Utah—on the Zion National Park highway—have had their beauty sleep disturbed so often to give first aid to the injured, after some daring driver tried to negotiate a turn on leaving town at high speed, they did this. Photograph shows the sign they had erected near the turn, as the last word in warning.

Nearly 26 Million Cars in World, Says Census

The world had 25,978,928 automotive vehicles in operation on January 1, according to figures of the Department of Commerce at Washington, compiled from a world-wide census. This total is 3,273,000 in excess of that for the year before.

While the United States predominated overwhelmingly in vehicles in operation, with 19,980,486, other countries were becoming more important factors. Great Britain had 1,474,978 machines running: France, 655,000; Canada, 727,594; Germany, 500,000; Italy, 184,709; Argentina, 151,289; Brazil, 64,000, and Russia, 78,000.

Apparently the country where the automobile is least desired is Tibet, for the search disclosed only one machine there, a motor cycle.

The January 1 total for passenger cars alone was 20,769,151, against 18,878,780 the previous year.

DEVICE "OUT-THINKS" MAN IN MANY CASES

A remarkable electric clock with uncanny powers has been invented by a Washington ophthalmologist, Dr. J. G. Van Slyke, who has turned it to some tasks that even many humans are incapable of doing. This clock will turn on automobile parking light 15 minutes after sundown—not at 5 o'clock or 6 o'clock, but exactly 15 minutes after the sun has sunk below the horizon. It will turn that same parking light off at daybreak the following morning in the same mysterious way. The invention will do other remarkable things in the same mysterious way. The inventor will do other remarkable things without adjustment at any time, except every four years, to account for leap year. Government biological experts are monitoring considerable interest in Doctor Van Slyke's invention.

Chic Afternoon Frock; Scalloped Blouse; Cape

Here is a dainty afternoon frock of powder blue flat crepe with scalloped blouse and a cape of white crepe, which is embroidered with blue circlets.

Sleeves Are Important in Gowns This Season

Sleeves are to play a very important role in all smart frocks and afternoon gowns this season. First you glance at the sleeves and then you see that the rest of the dress is exquisite, too. The full balloon sleeves are the most fascinating. They take you back to the peasant costumes and go with apron-skirts, gorgeous flares of color and gayly embroidered overeffects.

The balloon sleeve fits well over the shoulders and does not begin to bulge until it reaches the elbow, then it bursts forth in all its glory and finally tapers again, fitting into a tight band at the wrist. Buttons, gay bits of ribbon or silk tassels sometimes fasten it together. Most of the sleeves are of taffeta and chiffon combined with lace.

Another very popular type of sleeve, particularly on the strictly tailored frock, is just a long, tight sleeve with a big flare cuff. This cuff-sleeve is unusually smart with the choker-collared frock.

Cape frocks and gowns have the frilly, fussy sleeve. Crepe ninette, just a shade firmer than georgette, lends itself delightfully to both the dress and the sleeve. Sheer without being transparent, it is similar to crepe Elizabeth and crepe roma.

High Collars Are in Fashion This Spring

Are you wearing a high collar? Well, if not you will have to see about it, for high collars are distinctly in the race. They have an unmistakable look of smartness about them, too. When you see one you do not have to have it explained as style, for, somehow, with unfailing regularity, it manages to explain itself. Some of them are very high, these for those with necks that demand the lines. Then others are no higher than an inch or two, and they manage to tie with long ends so that if that extraordinary confinement at the neck becomes too much for the wearer, then the collar can be opened and allowed to fall back picturesquely, too. Even the necks of the new sweaters are high and some of them tie about in a scarf-like manner with streamers allowed to fall away at the side.

Scallops are now on the edges of skirts or on the edges of various tiers that go to make up a skirt. They are decorative looking without interfering in any way with the prescribed simplicity that is the keynote of the modern costume.

Long-Skirted Evening Frocks Are in Picture

Long-skirted evening frocks have made their appearance. Both matrons and young misses are bursting forth in beautiful frocks of ankle length. Usually the frock is of taffeta with a semi-fitted bodice and very full skirt. The bodice is severely plain, whereas the skirt is trimmed with ruffles, scalloped edged, bordered in contrasting color or trimmed in gold or silver appliques. Hems are often uneven, either drooping at the sides or at the rear. One sublimely beautiful gown of crisp white taffeta had a deeply-scalloped hem line bordered in a wide band of gold cloth. Long full sleeves gathered into wristbands were also of gold cloth. The bodice was snug and not extremely long waisted.

White is the predominating color for evening wear at present. Next in preference comes black. At formal gatherings one sees less red and green than formerly since brilliant colors are outnumbered by white, silver and black.

Brass Prints Are Shaded

The vogue for shaded effects is reflected in the new prints, which show the same design in three different shadings on a single piece.

ALIEN AND NEGRO RIOTING

An article in the New York Outlook by Dixon Merritt on the race riot in Cartaret, N. J., shows that it was different from the average Northern as well as Southern disturbance of the sort. It might almost be called a European race riot, for Cartaret is largely populated by Hungarians Poles and Portuguese, and these aliens not only accepted the incoming negroes as next door neighbors but as social equals, it being "very common" to see "white women lolling on the shoulders of negro men." Economic competition in the manufacturing plants seems to have been the one basic cause of the trouble. In any case the alien whites, after fraternizing freely with the blacks, finally turned upon the latter after one of them had shot a white under provocation, burned the negro church and drove all the blacks out of town.

And yet one negro, when interviewed, said he liked Cartaret, "not because it paid him more money than his native village in Georgia would have paid him, but because of the association with white people." Another, "black as Egypt but with the dignified open face that belongs to a certain sturdy type of negroes," intimated that association with such white people was not to his taste, declared that he had nothing whatever to do with them, and that he stayed in Cartaret solely because he could make more money. Another respectable negro is quoted as saying before the Cartaret riot that "the morals of my people simply will not stand up under the conditions which they sometimes have to face in industrial towns of the North." Dixon Merritt's interpretation of the meaning of this utterance is that sooner or later the better class negroes in Northern industrial towns "will very likely fall to the level of the lowest-class whites." The point is notable because it is often overlooked that there are higher and lower levels among negroes as well as among whites.

JEFFERSON'S DAY.

It is announced that the Government will fittingly devote a week instead of a single day to the celebration of the Declaration of Independence in this sesquicentennial year. Exactly fifty years after that immortal document was written in Philadelphia Thomas Jefferson, its author, died at Monticello, his Virginia home. This fact is a reminder that, though the celebration naturally belongs to Philadelphia, the "cradle of liberty," the chief leaders in the great movement toward American independence, including both Washington and Jefferson, belonged elsewhere. Philadelphia was for a time the capital of the new nation, not because of its native leadership, but because it was the largest central city. Our great military captain and first President, was a Virginian. Our second President, John Adams, hailed from Massachusetts, and our third, Thomas Jefferson, was again a Virginian.

The Fourth of July is our country's anniversary, but it is also Thomas Jefferson's day, the day of his Declaration and the day of his death, fifty years later. Although he never made a formal speech, he was unquestionably the ablest political leader of his time as well as its boldest thinker and most consistent representative of the new experiment in democracy. He rescued the country from the Federalist party's dangerous trend toward aristocratic government, and from his first election as President in 1800 may be said to date the real free America which became so great and so marked a triumph of the experiment of a democratic republic. The extent of the country's debt to Thomas Jefferson is incalculable.

A FORESTRY CONFERENCE.

The unreflecting might suppose that forestry in each country's own affair and that the possibilities of international cooperation and aid are few, if any. That there are such possibilities has been shown at the international conference on forestry, the first of its kind, which has just been held at Rome, attended by about 400 delegates from many countries, with the United States creditably represented. Although in this matter each country must learn chiefly from its own experience, there is much to be gained by international conference and a systematic exchange of forestry knowledge. The United States particularly, with lumber use in this country continuing to outrun lumber growth six to one, is bound to derive benefit from contact and conference with the older nations of Europe which have long suffered from forest depletion and have developed systematic measures for grappling with the problem.

It is interesting to know of effort already made in this country which illustrates what the United States can do, as part of its share in the international exchange in forestry help. We read that millions of young trees that have been planted in Great Britain, France and Italy, as part of the reforestation work since the war, are from seeds sent there annually since 1919 by the American Tree Association, and that the forestry officials of those countries have written in warm appreciation of the gift and its good results. International conference and mutual aid ought to have far-reaching effects in improved regulation and more careful preservation of the forests of the world.

A SIMPLIFIED VITAMIN LESSON.

One of our leading chemists was asked if the day would come when man could go without food, as it is used at present, and get all his nourishment from pills of scientifically constructed food.

His reply was that it was extremely unlikely that we should ever feed on pills of pure chemicals.

Whilst cooking and canning could deprive the food of some of its elements, nevertheless the transportation of food was now so easy that practically everybody could have fruit and vegetables all the year round.

An interesting exhibit used in his popular lecture on vitamins in foods, was actual samples of the foods which had within them, to the greatest degree, the four vitamins essential to robust health.

First was Vitamin A, which is essential to normal growth. The foods containing this in greatest abundance were two eggs in egg cups, a bottle of milk, and some spinach on a plate.

Second was Vitamin B, which has the power of helping the digestive apparatus to more thoroughly mix foods, and absorb them into the blood. The foods shown as containing this vitamin to a large degree were lettuce, a loaf of whole wheat bread, a plateful of nuts and green peas, and a pile of yeast cakes.

Under C, there were oranges, lettuce, tomatoes and milk. This is the vitamin which prevents scurvy.

Under D, necessary for the proper development of bone, was cod liver oil. This very valuable food, cod liver oil, may be obtained in a concentrated tablet form, which mixed with sugar, can be used just where it is needed most, that is with children, who naturally find the cod liver oil rather hard to take.

Foods can be good foods without vitamins and these were likewise shown. They were white bread, vegetables oils, and purified sugars. If your taste inclines toward these latter foods, don't feel that you musn't eat them because they have no nourishment or that they are harmful. The lesson is simply that you are able to live and have surplus energy by means of the food that you eat.

Our chemist in closing his lecture stated that "the remedy against daily tiredness, particularly in the spring, is to eat all the year round a liberal allowance of milk, green vegetables and fruit. Eggs and meat if you work hard physically."

In these days when vitamins are now known to be such vital factors in our food, it is helpful to have this practical information from a professor of chemistry.

Today's Story in New York History

By Frederic A. Godcharles.

(Copyright, 1926, by the Author)

Colonel Scott and Captain Perry Win Brilliant Victory in Capture of Fort George, May 27, 1813.

During the second war with Great Britain, when the navigation opened in the spring of 1813, General Henry Dearborn, being sure of efficient cooperation on Lake Ontario, determined on an offensive movement, which met with greater success than any which had hitherto been undertaken on the frontier.

The chief ports of the enemy on the lake were Kingston and York, at each of which a large vessel was building. Kingston was protected by forts, and by a flotilla, while York was poorly fortified, and defended only by a garrison under General Sir Roger Hale Sheaffe.

Against the latter post General Dearborn directed a combined military and naval expedition. On April 27, 1813, the troops led by General Zebulon M. Pike, landed under cover of the fire of the flotilla, successfully attacked the enemy and drove them off with the loss of half of their numbers, and the town was taken. The Americans lost 286, among whom was General Pike.

The victors left York early in May, and proceeded on a still more important movement, which was directed against Fort George, at the mouth of the Niagara River, an excellent position with a strong garrison.

Stormy weather had detained the Americans at York for a week. Losses and sickness had reduced the number of these troops to one thousand. These were again conveyed by the fleet of Commodore Isaac Chauncey, who, with General Dearborn and naval officers, went before in the pilot-schooner "Lady of the Lake," and selected a landing place four miles east of Fort Niagara.

The British force at Fort George and environs, under General Vincent, then numbered about 1,800 Besides Fort George they had several works along the Niagara River.

The American troops were debarked May 8, and Chauncey sailed for Sackett's Harbor for supplies and reinforcements for the army. He returned to Dearborn's camp, May 22, and the same evening Captain Oliver H. Perry arrived there.

Arrangements were immediately made for an attack on Fort George. Chauncey and Perry reconnoitred the enemy's batteries. Dearborn was ill, but on the morning of May 27, the troops were conveyed by the squadron to a point a little westward of the mouth of the Niagara, and landed under cover of the guns of the fleet.

The advance was led by Colonel Winfield Scott, accompanied by Captain Perry, who had charge of the boats. He and Scott both leaped into the water at the head of the first division of the troops, and, in the face of a galling fire and gleaming bayonets, they ascended the bank.

This disembarkation and the skilful management of the fleet was as conspicuous here as at York. The hot fire of the vessels made it impossible for the enemy's troops to make an effectual opposition to the landing, and his batteries were soon silenced.

The other troops followed and all were led to the assault with great gallantry by Colonel Scott.

General Vincent was soon satisfied that he must retreat, and knowing Fort George to be untenable, ordered the garrison to spike the guns, destroy the ammunition, and abandon it. This was done, and the whole British force retreated westward to a strong position among the hills, at a place called "The Beaver Dams," about eighteen miles from the Niagara River.

The American loss was between sixty and seventy, that of the enemy about nine hundred. Colonel Scott was severely wounded by the explosion of a powder magazine, but was able to again lead his troops in August.

The capture of Fort George turned the remaining British posts and soon the whole Niagara frontier of Canada passed into the hands of the Americans.

Greene's Plans Costly to State

Net Result of Realty Operations on Behalf of State in Albany Is Rent Paid on Vacant Buildings and Criticism of Colonel Greene.

Albany, May 27.—Political Albany is having quite a laugh these days at the expense of Colonel Frederick Stuart Greene, state superintendent of public works.

Some weeks ago the state decided to sell Geological Hall in State street, in which is located the State Department of Farms and Markets. Colonel Greene was the auctioneer and when the bidding did not run high enough he bid in the building for the state at $300,000.

Subsequently Colonel Greene decided the state ought to buy the old Albany Journal building on the river from William Barnes, one time Republican leader of Albany county.

After Barnes had conferred with Colonel Greene and Governor Al Smith the state decided to buy the Barnes building for $550,000, paying $250,000 in cash while Barnes took the Geological Hall at $300,000.

When this deal had been made it developed that the officials of the State Department of Farms and Markets were strongly opposed to moving out of the old Geological Hall. In fact they put up such a "kick" that Colonel Greene decided he could not have the Farms and Markets Department moved to the Journal building. It was then decided that the Farms and Markets Department would remain in their present home but that they would have to pay Barnes a good rent for the building the state formerly had owned.

And then just when he thought he had the matter all settled Colonel Greene found he had something else to think about.

For several years the Department of Public Works has been located at 55 Lancaster street, whose owner had hired an attorney and served notice on the state that he intended to hold the state to the lease for the remainder of the year, which totals something like $6,000.

So it developed that after Colonel Greene has moved his office into the Barnes building, the state will be paying rent on a vacant office in Lancaster street and also for the old Geological Hall where the Farms and Markets Department has been located for many years.

Republican opponents of Colonel Greene are saying he ought to stick to road building and not go into the building business.

TWO YARDS OF GREEN SILK

By SHIRLEY L. SEIFERT

(© by Western Newspaper Union.)

IT IS hard to work indoors in the springtime—any kind of work—any kind of indoors, if you must stay there all day from the fresh emerald-green morning to the soft opal evening and miss all the hours of sunshine between.

Annie Bryan worked indoors of indoors all day. She sold linings from behind a scarred dark wood counter at the head of the escalator in the middle of the second floor of the Banner store. Behind her was a barrier twice her height built up of bolts and boxes of lining stuff on shelves. Before her and to both sides spread alluring enough vistas to the casual observer, delicate summer tissues of cotton and silk and light woolen, draped and swirled till the whole floor made you think of some eastern bazaar. Beyond the dress goods somewhere were windows.

Sometimes Annie Bryan thought spring would have been easier had she sold these fluffier materials. Dress goods had such a long summer season now that Florida had become fashionable. But she was the kind of person who sold linings. Not much style to her figure, no apparent imagination about her own clothes, a smooth but olive-tinted skin, rather stubborn straight dark hair and eyes that demanded glasses. One pair of glasses cost as much as a new dress, but Annie bought the glasses. And wore them. Sensibly, but not beautifully.

But one spring day she had a lovely customer. Most of her customers were in sateens, too much like herself, poorish folk seeking stout materials for linings or cheap petticoats. This was a pretty little lady in a sky-blue dress like those you see in glass cases in special shops. She was about Annie's own age, perhaps older; but you knew when you looked at her clear blue eyes that the ache of things was largely taken from her by one of these successful American husbands. Annie knew the kind. They went through doors as if walls crumbled at their approach. They had clean chins and slick hair and smelled nice when they brushed by you. With the woman, besides, was a little boy with large asking brown eyes. The husband would be dark and handsome.

"Black sateen," said the lady, "your very best quality, please."

"You see," she explained later, "I want it for a special purpose. I am draping a dressing table in a spare room. I'd like silk for the curtains, but it shows every spot and frays so quickly. Oh, thats very nice, isn't it?"

Annie opened her ears suspiciously. Black curtains on a dressing table?

"Now," said the customer, when Annie had cut and folded the sateen—a soft, lustrous piece, not much in demand, "will you show me some green to go with it? I want this shade of green."

From a silk bag she took a cord, the sort used for hanging mirrors. Annie's heart misgave her. She had no sateen to match that delicate leaf tone, in sateen colors were colors, bold and unmistakable. They were too primal to be shades. Doubtfully Annie produced her greens. The woman shuddered—and sighed.

"Oh, dear! I'll have to try some place else for that, too! I've been all morning locating the cord. Sometimes I wish I didn't have ideas, that I had gone ahead and bought furniture. I'm always having impulses." She laughed wearily at Annie, making Annie glow, though the woman was talking to herself really in soft exasperation. "I've lacquered some old pieces black and I wanted a draped dressing table below an oval mirror. I am putting green decorations on the furniture to brighten it and I wanted a touch of green on the table."

"It's the sateen," said Annie. "You won't find it any better. It just comes in certain standard colors."

"Then what will I do?" said the lady. "Can you suggest anything? I wanted green cording and facing."

Annie would have made a suggestion or died of shame. She looked at the green cord and thought and thought. She had it! There was a green over-silk in one of her bolts. It was a left-over brought down from the lamp-shade department. Annie cautiously produced it. It was just what the customer wanted. In the talk that followed Annie acquired a new bedroom. Heretofore, in utter dislike of the sleeping quarters forced upon her by reality, she had dreamed herself various bedrooms from bird's-eye maple to ivory enamel. Now she would have one in black lacquer and spring green.

"I'll take the sateen with me," said the customer to wistful Annie, and gave her name and address. The delectable room would be in a dream of a cottage out on the Sunday road. One Sunday Annie had driven along there in the automobile of a friend's uncle.

Five minutes after the customer departed, Annie came to. As she went to close the box that had held the green silk, the girl from the handkerchief counter called to her:

"Miss Bryan, oh, Miss Bryan! Did you sell this?"

She held down to Annie a packet of green silk, which Annie had enclosed with the black sateen.

"It seems fell outa some package," said the girl.

"It certainly did," said Annie, matching the silk.

She felt tired to it, as out of patience with the careless girl as if she were the inconsiderate customer. Mrs. Dean had taken the material with her to work on that afternoon. In her gratitude for Annie's helpfulness she had chatted away about her plans, her pretty fingers going this way and that as they would ever her sewing later. She would be disappointed. She wasn't the kind that would raise a fuss, but she would be disappointed. Annie took the silk out to lunch with her and sent it to Mrs. Dean by special delivery. But she felt disturbed into the next day.

The third day brought a reply from the customer. A strange reply. Would Annie Bryan take a few minutes at closing time, five-thirty, and meet Mrs. Dean in her husband's office that evening? Annie couldn't imagine!

She was trembling a little and nervous when she came to the husband's office. She stammered when she gave her name to the telephone operator and said she was to see Mrs. Deane. The operator couldn't imagine, either.

"Oh, that's you!" she said cryptically, unbelievingly, and announced Annie. "You're to go right in. That door there!"

Mrs. Deane, alone, sat in a carved walnut chair beside a glass-topped table.

"I asked you to come here, because we live so far out," she said, kindly. "Won't you sit down? My husband's out on a business errand. He said for me to manage this. Miss Bryan, it was thoughtful of you to mail that silk—you so busy and it was such a little matter!"

"Oh, that's all right," said Annie. "I knew you'd be wanting it."

"Miss Bryan, do you like to work down town?"

"Do I like it?" said Annie. "No, I have to."

The way she said it meant that to live she must eat and be sheltered, and clothing was her only apparent solution, with all the complications that those facts involved.

"I have been looking," said Mrs. Dean, both of them silent for a minute, "for a trustworthy young woman to help me with my children. I have two boys, the one you saw with me yesterday and one a little older. The older one was struck by an automobile a few weeks ago and injured very slightly. If you consider what might have happened to him. But he's still in bandages. I'm telling you this to make you understand. My boys are very active children. Unless I must control their activity or I must direct all my energy to their companionship. I love to be with them. I've always given them my care and always shall, but I have a husband and other duties which I cannot neglect. If I want to be a worthwhile mate. If I want to be a worthwhile parent—oh, that's too big to go into here—now. I wonder if you would consider taking the place."

"I never thought of being a nursemaid," said Annie, not offended.

"Not a nursemaid. We live in the suburbs near the woods. The boys are interested in trees, in flowers, in animals. You'd be their responsible companion that way, and others when I couldn't be with them."

"I'm sorry, but I don't know about flowers and animals—much."

"As much as little as I do, perhaps; but you could study with them. That's what they like better than teaching. Of course, as my husband says, there isn't a promise of a great future in this work, though I feel I'm going to like you. I said when I came home yesterday that you looked just what I wanted. I told you I will have ideas. And then the silk came."

Annie couldn't get the connection between the silk and this other matter.

"Why," said Mrs. Dean. "I want a person with a conscience. I'll pay you what you get at the store. If you can, I'd like you to stay at the house."

Well, still Annie couldn't imagine. She was to be paid to live in a beautiful house with draped dressing tables and to walk in the woods with those beautiful boys and tell them fairy tales, maybe, and learn about flowers—paid for her own emancipation. It took a half hour more to settle the matter reasonably. Mrs. Dean offered to take Annie home in her car.

"Thank you," said Annie. "But I've got to stay down town awhile."

She meant that in a minute she was going to cry. The doctor had said she must not cry anywhere, that her eyes must be irritated as little as possible. But he had also said she ought to take a year in the country to rest those eyes. That evening, she might afford one cry to end it.

"Two yards of green silk!" she kept saying to herself, as she walked along the street, her face flushed high with a beautiful greenish color. "Two yards of green silk."

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

by Mary Graham Bonner

GARTER SNAKE FAMILIES

"I don't care about big families," said Mrs. Single-Striped Garter Snake, known to her friends in the zoo as Nellie.

"You like bigger families than I do," said her mother, known as Milly.

"And you both like bigger families than I do," said another Single-Striped Garter Snake, known as Lily.

"I don't care," she added, "to have so many that there might be danger of their eating all the food that would otherwise be given to us."

"That speech makes you sound more like a pig than a snake," said Nellie, hissing and wriggling in disgust.

"Oh, you mustn't mind what she says," remarked Milly. "She can't help it that there aren't so many little snakes around her, as she is pretending she only likes to have a few around."

"You only have two more than I have," said Lily, hissing angrily, "and I am not like a pig.

"I'm like a snake.

"Does a pig hiss and wriggle?

"I'd like to know that! Of course I know the answer to it, but I just would like to see you give any other answer to it than the one I already know.

"You Mustn't Mind What She Says."

"I've put you in a hole, all right."

"You've not put me in a hole at all. I'm not in a hole and you can't put me in one."

"But I have trapped you."

"You haven't trapped me at all. I'm quite free of any trap."

"But I mean that I have given you no opening for any other answer than the one I already know."

"I don't need your gift of an opening, even if you would give me one, which you wouldn't."

Lily paid no more attention to this sort of talk, but went on, the way she had been talking.

"Can a pig crawl as fast as I can? No, a pig can't crawl at all.

"A pig grunts and squeals. A pig walks and never crawls."

"Why do you ask questions, if you know the answers to the questions yourself?" asked Nellie.

"That seems a foolish thing to do. When one asks questions it should be to gain more information and become wiser and more intelligent."

"Because I wanted to prove to you two snakes that you were wrong."

"I was the one who said you were more like a pig than a snake, so Milly isn't to blame," said Nellie.

"Besides I said that because you made a selfish, greedy speech like a pig, not because you looked or moved other than like a snake," Nellie ended.

These snakes were named the Single-Striped Garter Snakes because of a yellow stripe on their backs.

They were greenish-black in color, with yellow throats and yellow spots here and there on their skins.

The snake children they were talking about had greenish stripes, too.

"I have six nice little snake children," said Lily after a moment.

"To be sure you have," said Milly, "and I only have eight, only two more than you have."

"And you, Nellie, have fifteen or sixteen, I've forgotten the exact number, and that isn't really many. For, as you say, you like just your few children."

"I'm pleased," said Nellie. "No, I wouldn't want a big family.

"But let's not fight about it, for none of us really have big families."

For a snake thinks a family of from six to fifteen snakes is very, very, very small!

A Smart Boy

Freddie was sobbing bitterly in the road, and the kind-hearted old gentleman stopped to ascertain the cause of the trouble.

"What's the matter, my little man?" he asked.

"Boo—I've lost my new ball," sobbed the youngster, "and I've no money to get another!"

"Never mind," said the old gentleman; "here's a shilling to go and buy a new one." And out came a bright coin which Freddie promptly pocketed. "Where did you lose your ball, sonny?" he inquired, as an afterthought.

"It went through your dining room window!" said Freddie, as he disappeared round the corner.—Tit-Bits.

THE CASTOR OYLL.

Rather large herds of these creatures have been raised for centuries in the vicinity of the ancient Welsh border stronghold of Castor. There the weather is particularly damp, with heavy rains occurring nearly every day, and to protect itself from the climate the oyll (pronounced "ile" by Welshmen) has developed a hide that is very rubbery and waterproof. It is for these hides that the animal is raised, and when shipped to London and other manufacturing centers they are made into the oyll-skin slickers that are worn in practically every quarter of the globe.

The oyll is a small creature, but the wrinkled skin shows on its broad fat body when outraged and stretched is large enough to make at least half a slicker. The feet are split peanuts, the tail a clove, and the neck a toothpick. The filbert head possesses split almond ears and a popcorn nose. The facial expression is pen and ink, or, if care is taken, it can be done with a hack saw and gimlet.

Methodist Women End Conference

Home Missionary Society of Kingston District of Methodist Church Hears Interesting Talk on Work of Church—Officers Elected For Ensuing Year.

The Kingston District of the Women's Home Missionary Societies, including fourteen charges, reconvened in the afternoon on Wednesday at the St. James M. E. Church following the luncheon which was served the delegates by the Ladies' Aid Society of the St. James Church at 1 o'clock.

After the singing of a hymn and the conclusion of the exceedingly interesting reports of the auxiliaries and circles given through Mrs. F. Thompson, a valuable round table was led by Mrs. M. S. Eylar. In addition to the information given, many questions were asked.

At this point the program was pleasingly varied by a vocal selection, a musical arrangement of the Twenty-third Psalm, given by Mrs. Rich, soprano soloist of the St James M. E. Church. Throughout the day Miss Anderson most acceptably presided at the organ.

Work Among the Indians.

The main address of the afternoon was given by Miss Mary Collins, one of the field secretaries of the Home Missionary Society, who told interestingly of some of the work among the Navajo Indians. She graphically described the setting of her story in Colorado surrounded by mighty mountains. The Navajo Industrial Home there tries to take children not more than six years of age in order to instill Christian teaching before the Indian superstitions can gain a foothold in the childish mind.

Miss Collins described her attempt to make friends with the attractive little Indian children, even to the point of telling them stories. She met only with stolidity and stand-offishness. Then the speaker was taken in an old Ford, way back in the mountains to a typical Indian home, which did not sound at all inviting to a white man or woman. There she realized that the stories she had tried to tell the children in the morning had no meaning to them, for they knew no such life as she did. Taking her cue from this fact, Miss Collins on her return to the school was able to make very real friends of the children by telling them how strangely boys and girls live where her home was. In this way she was able to learn from them of their happy life in the school, where they were learning the Christian way of living. Miss Collins also told of some splendid work in West Virginia, where children are helped to grow into Christian men and women, "Servants of the King." All of this work is being carried on by the Women's Home Missionary Society.

Officers Elected.

The report of the nominating committee, Mrs. George B. Hayes, of Kingston, chairman, Mrs. Harry Ennist, Mrs. M. S. Eylar, Mrs. G. B. Smith, was then given and resulted in the following officers being elected for the ensuing year:

President, Mrs. J. C. Coddington, Saugerties; vice president, Mrs. Wyllis Ryder, Kingston; recording secretary, Mrs. George Mead, Kingston; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Frank Thompson, Kingston; treasurer, Mrs. James Guttridge, Grand Gorge; secretary of young people's work, Mrs. Pressey, Delhi; secretary of children's work, Mrs. George Shultis, Kingston; secretary of evangelism and stewardship, Mrs. W. Stanley Risch, Arkville; secretary of literature, Mrs. F. Cronk, Grand Gorge; secretary of mite boxes and thank offering, Mrs. E. W. Ives, Walton.

Following the election of officers, the Committee on Courtesies, Mrs. H. E. Winans, Mrs. Daniel Piper, Mrs. R. L. Lindsay, expressed for the meeting, their gratitude to the officers of the St. James M. E. Church for the privilege of holding the meeting there; to the Rev. Mr. Mead for his greeting; to the ladies of the St. James M. E. Church for their generous hospitality; to the conference officers for coming to them and giving them the inspiration of their presence and also for their addresses; to the district officers for their loyal services; and to the musicians, including the organist for the inspiration of their music. The afternoon session closed with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie that Binds" and the pronouncing of the benediction by the Rev. Mr. Meade.

Music which added to the life of the morning session was the playing of two very pleasing selections by the Y. W. C. A. Mandolin Club led by Mrs. Buley.

The special speaker of the morning was Mrs. Samuel Williams, conference mite box secretary, who told graphically and understandingly of the annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society held recently at Pasadena, California, at the First Methodist Church of that city. Mrs. Williams chose to speak on that subject in the hope of an interest the women present that many of them would be inspired to attend the next annual meeting to be held at Rochester, N. Y.

Additional delegates attending were Mrs. Kenneth Everett, Mrs. W. F. Arringer, Mrs. W. J. Crandon, Mrs. Clayton Smith, Kingston; Mrs. A. D. Powell, Delhi.

The officers of this gathering were: New York Conference president, Mrs. Samuel Gaulin; New York Conference correspondence secretary, Mrs. M. S. Eylar. District officers: President, Mrs. Jesse Coddington, Saugerties; vice president, Mrs. A. H. Hayner, Kingston; recording secretary, Mrs Edith Myer, Kingston; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Frank Thompson, Kingston; treasurer, Mrs. James Guttridge, Grand Gorge.

Word was received last week from the Rev. John Howard of Secaucus, N. J., who was to preach as a candidate next Sunday morning, that he could not be here on that date, but it is expected that there will be a candidate on Sunday morning, May 30, at 11 o'clock standard time and a large congregation is requested.

About thirty members attended the meeting of the Circle held at the home of Miss Bertha Sutton last Friday evening. After the business meeting which was in charge of the president, John Mackey, a short program, consisting of a reading by Arthur Zimmer, a musical selection by George Hallock and Le Verne Powell, a recitation by Marion Mackey and a reading by Altie Wilkin, was rendered. Several games were enjoyed and refreshments served, and at midnight all departed for their homes. The June meeting will be held at the Cronk home.

Modern Woman as a Rebel Against Rules

My husband says that no institution can be successfully run without rules, and he wishes I would be more observant of the golden rule in the institution we call home.

But I really do not care for rules, and I think they must be especially annoying to the inmates of prisons.

Just fancy never going to a matinee or recital without an attendant! But my husband says the prisoners do not go for the same sort of amusements that I do, and that he, himself, personally, can imagine no greater punishment for a man than to be obliged to attend the average recital.

They have a sad rule in our library which prohibits a barefoot boy from getting a book, and the boys are so disappointed and embarrassed.

I just adore barefoot boys, and my husband says that Whittier did, too.

We once met a dear old bishop with freckles like little ginger snaps who told us that when he was a kid his greatest joy was to feel the warm sand of spring time coming up between his toes. And he said he got his first impression of higher ideals from a book.—Kansas City Star.

As Told by Irvin S. Cobb

H. C. OF L. HAD DROPPED

As I heard the tale it had to do with a small community where the railroad ran through the main street and on either side of the track stood a short order restaurant owned and operated by a colored man.

One night the official bad man of the vicinity came lurching into one of these rival establishments. It immediately was apparent to the apprehensive eye of the proprietor that the visitor was looking for trouble.

While the uneasy negro made pretense at being glad to see him the bully flopped his long frame into a chair and demanded:

"Nigger, have you got a nice tender sirloin steak here?"

"Yas, suh!"

"All right, then; you cook it for me and don't you cook it too long else I'll cook you awhile myself. And along with it you better bring me some fried onions and fried potatoes and some celery and a mess of hot biscuits and green peas and roasting ears and pie and coffee and anything else tasty that you've got around this dump. Now jump before I start jumpin' you."

The black man jumped. In a miraculously short time, considering the magnitude of the order, he staggered in from his cubbyhole of a kitchen at the rear bearing a waiter-tray piled high with dishes. He ranged the array of food in a half moon effect before his patron and then fluttered back a few paces hoping for the best, yet dreading the worst.

When the bad man had eaten he leaned back in his chair, drew a spring-back dirk knife out of his pocket, flipped its five-inch blade out with a nudge of a practiced thumb and leisurely picked his teeth with its needlelike point. His caterer watched him as a fascinated bird watches a coiled serpent.

Suddenly he spoke and the negro jumped.

"What sort of a dump does that other nigger over across the tracks run?" he asked.

"Oh, Mister Gatlin, you wouldn't lak dat place n-tall," stated the colored man. "Dat nigger watchelly thinks a fly is somethin' you cooks wid. He ain't sanitarious, lak I aims to be."

"Yes," said the bully, "and what's more, he's a robber—he's a regular pirate."

"Is dat so, suh?"

"Well, judge for yourself. Last night I went into that nigger's joint and ordered just about what I've had here tonight—maybe a little more, maybe a little less. When I got through I asked him what the damage was and, do you know, that black scoundrel had the gall to ask me for a dollar and a quarter! Of course I oughter killed him. But something sort of stayed my hand. All I done to him was just to cut off both his ears with this here frog-sticker and feed 'em to him. By the way, what do I owe you for this mess of victles?"

"Them," said the darkey, "I reckon a dime would be ample."

Gay Time

Nothing more interesting than the youngsters in the studio schools, who between scenes are receiving their education at the expense of the picture companies. They are a precocious lot and view life from a peculiar angle.

The other day one of the teachers found a group on the floor cutting actresses out of magazines and laying them out in a long line. She thought the kiddies were trying to tell the different makes and types of cars but was speedily enlightened.

"We don't care about that part of it," they told her, "but if we get enough pictures it will make a dandy funeral."

NOVEL MEXICAN DISHES

Pacific Coast Expert Tells How to Prepare Them

(Editor's Note: This is one of an unusual cooking series contributed to this paper by six famous cooks. Cut it out and paste in your cook book.)

Enchiladas, picadillo, Spanish rice, beans a la Ayre, and refritos!

Those words conjure up pictures of most palatable and spicy dishes to the Spaniard. And many an American has fallen for their tempting toothsomeness.

MRS. KATE BREW VAUGHN

Mrs. Kate Brew Vaughn, home economics director, Los Angeles, and author of several cook books, was taught how to make these dishes by a Mexican lady.

Fragrant and Delicious

Mrs. Vaughn gives the following directions for making enchiladas. The gravy may be made the day before. Its ingredients are, 4 ounces chili peppers, 1½ pounds tomatoes, 2 slices hard toast, 1 small onion, 1 pinch each of clove, thyme, pepper, sugar, and salt.

Open peppers, and if it is not desired very hot, remove veins and seeds. Soak in boiling water about 10 minutes. Skin tomatoes by holding over flame. Put toast and onion through food chopper and then strain all the ingredients in order to make a smooth gravy. Melt two tablespoons shortening in frying pan, add gravy, and simmer slowly until smooth and thick.

Filling for Enchiladas (Picadillo)

1 pound pork
1 tablespoon shortening
1 teaspoon chopped onion
Clove of garlic (chopped)
½ cup chili sauce
1 tablespoon chopped green olives
1 tablespoon chopped, blanched almonds
1 tablespoon raisins (chopped)
1 teaspoon vinegar
1 pinch salt
1 pinch sugar
1 teaspoon olive oil

Boil pork until tender, then chop fine. Melt shortening and fry pork until brown. Add onion, garlic, and chili sauce, and fry for three minutes. Add olives, almonds, and raisins, and cook two or more minutes. Just before removing add vinegar, salt, sugar and olive oil.

Make Tortillas, Too

1 quart white flour
1 cup lard
2 teaspoons salt
Enough water or milk to make dough sufficiently thick to roll out like biscuit.

Divide into balls size of turkey egg and pat between the hands until thin and round and cook on top of the stove without grease. After frying dip in hot gravy, place on plate, and place 1½ tablespoons of filling in center. Roll tortilla loosely and garnish with gravy, grated cheese, sliced onion that has been soaked in salt water a few minutes, a green olive, blanched almond, radish, and a sprig of parsley.

Spanish Rice

1 cup rice
1 tablespoon shortening
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 clove of garlic
½ cup tomato sauce
1 quart boiling water
Pepper and salt to taste

Melt the shortening, add the onion, and partially cook, not allowing to brown. Add to rice and fry until brown. Add the tomato sauce a little at a time, allowing each portion to almost cook dry before adding more. Add the boiling water. Do not stir, and allow to simmer slowly until done. If it is necessary to add more water, be sure it is boiling. Do not stir. Requires about 1½ hours of cooking.

Delicious String Beans

Here's a new way to prepare string beans—a la Ayre. Use 1½ pounds string beans of green beans, 2 cups, and 2 teaspoons cornstarch.

Cook string beans until tender. Separate into bundles of eight or ten. Make batter by beating whites of eggs until stiff. Add slightly beaten yolks. Continue to beat, adding cornstarch. Place a bundle of beans on a large tablespoon and place in batter, working batter around the beans with the spoon. Fry in hot fat until brown on all sides. Serve with the following sauce:

1 teaspoon shortening
1 teaspoon garlic
1 teaspoon chopped onion
1 small tomato
1 teaspoon cornstarch.
salt, pepper, and sugar

Melt shortening in frying pan and cook for a few minutes. Add the tomato chopped fine, and cook until almost dry. Add cornstarch and enough water to make a smooth sauce. Add salt and pepper.

"Pink Beans," Too

"Pink beans" (kidney beans) are very delicious. Their flavor cannot be surpassed. Take one pound of them, 1 teaspoonful salt, 1 tablespoonful fat, 1 ounce of cheese, and 1 small [illegible] tomatoes.

Wash beans well, and cook until enough water to cover well. Add about ½ hour, when others, green onion be sure to add salt. Add the tomato [illegible] When nearly cooked, drain [illegible] three hours, serving [illegible] Mash fat in frying pan. Add cheese and chopped [illegible] one minute, then remove to [illegible] pour beans and dry for three minutes. Add the cheese with [illegible] onion from [illegible] and mix thoroughly.

"You will find them rather very appetizing," Mrs. Vaughn says.

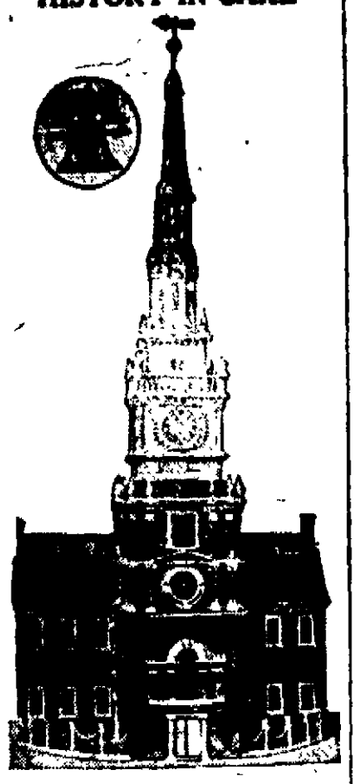
HISTORY IN CAKE



This replica of historic Independence Hall in Philadelphia is a fine example of the baker's art. It was made by the chef of one of Philadelphia's leading hotels to advertise the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, which will open in that city June 1 and run to December 1 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of American Independence. The "State House" stands on a table at the entrance to the main dining room of the hotel.

FIND READY MARKET FOR FAMILY TREES

English Peddlers Deal With Rich Americans.

Pedigree peddlers in England are said to be reaping a rich harvest from ambitious but credulous Americans of wealth. To them it is always open season on Yankees who wish to have the English branches of their family trees looked up.

It may not be possible to get a title for oneself but if one has money enough one can acquire at least a choice collection of titled ancestors. And if one has no objection to bars sinister in one's coat-of-arms, a king or two might be thrown in for an extra consideration. Just leave it to the pedigree peddler.

Of course there is a remote danger that the pedigree peddler will get caught while he is probing into your ancestry. In that event, if he is convicted, another must be engaged to go on with the research. One will do as well as another.

The pedigree peddlers have different methods of operation. If you engage one pedigree artist you may be handed an altogether different ancestry than if you engaged another. But if the pedigree peddler is clever, you will find it all down in black and white in the official records, if you feel inclined to check up. The ink in which your ancestors' names have been inscribed may appear a bit lighter than other entries, but time will remedy that.

Considering the results they obtain, and the bank balances of their victims, the pedigree peddlers are modest in their charges. The fee varies according to conditions—the importance of the title of the questionable ancestor; the risk incurred during the "research," and the eagerness of the client to acquire a pedigree.

Tracing a pedigree as a rule, however, is expensive. The bill for one is said to have come to $3,750. Charges between $1,000 and $2,500 are common, according to Tit-Bits. But bogus pedigrees sometimes can be obtained for as little as $50, when the client is not a stickler for authentication.

The pedigree peddler explains why he can spend so much time searching old records for so small a fee in his first unsolicited letter to his victim. He writes he stumbled across the victim's name while looking up the family tree of some well-known person, and that he is willing to sell a copy of it cheaply, as it is of no use to him.

Another scheme is to gain access to the vital records of some obscure parish and to write in the name of a mythical ancestor while no one is looking. One pedigree peddler, when asked to explain why the entry appeared to have been made recently, explained:

"Yes, that is due to the carbonic acid in my breath. The British museum uses a mixture containing carbonic acid for that purpose."

Earth's Doubtful Age

A scientist of Princeton university believes that recent discoveries in radio-activity have given us means of estimating the age of the earth. Uranium loses one-half of its radiating power in 5,000,000 years, and the presence of this element in the earth's crust would indicate that it is not less than 1,000,000,000 years old.

SPRING CONCERT AT CLINTON AVENUE CHURCH.

The music committee of Clinton Avenue M. E. Church has secured some exceptional talent for a spring concert to be given in the church auditorium on Monday evening, June 7, at 8 o'clock. He has conducted similar concerts in other churches of Kingston with great success. Miss Frances Keeney of Saugerties will render selections on the harp. Her work with the Saugerties Glee Club at their annual concert in Saugerties will be recalled by those people of Kingston who were present at this musical event. Holland Heermance will be the baritone soloist of the evening. Mr. Heermance is already familiar to those who attend Clinton Avenue Church, who speak with praise of this young man's work and who recognize his range and quality of tone to be of high standing.

Tickets for the concert may be purchased from any member of the music committee after Thursday of this week and will also be on sale at the church on the evening of the concert. It is expected that the church will be filled.

Schillings Blank K. & M. Silk Mills

The K. & M. Silk Mills run their losing streak to five games in the Industrial League Wednesday evening at the Athletic Field, losing to Schillings Furniture Company in a well played game, 5 to 0.

The Silkmen played good ball in the field, but they were unable to hit Williams, who allowed only one hit and struck out eleven. Glass got a single through short in the first inning when Ellsworth was about to cover second base on Maine's attempt to steal.

The game was sewn up in the second inning. Didnik hit a double to left field. He took third on Scheffel's out, Macholdt to Maine. Van Buren scored him with a single to lef Van Buren took third on Williams single to right. He scored on Alward. long fly to center field. Williams was thrown out at second on Newman's grounder. Two runs crossed the rubber.

The Furnituremen scored two more in the fourth on singles by Newman, Didnik and Van Buren, and a double by Williams. They scored their final run in the sixth.

Bowers pitched for the K. & M. He had good control, but was hit freely in the second and fourth inning.

SIDE-LINERS.

Alwardt's phenomenal catch in the second inning robbed Bowers of a hit.

Williams was too much for the Silkmen. He had them reaching for everything.

Van Buren and Didnik seemed to be the run-getters for Schillings, scoring four of the five runs.

Among other noticeable incidents at the game was when Connelly took his seat on the bench, after he was safe on first base.

Schillings played true to form for once. They have a good ball club and should be higher in the standing of the clubs.

Artie Rice had ought to be an artful dodger before the season is over. He has been ducking hard hit balls all year, but last night he had to get out of the way of a bat, which slipped out of the hands of one of the players.

Tagging Major League Bases

The Yankees staggered home to a 9 to 8 victory over the Red Sox, sweeping the series and running their winning streak up to sixteen straight. They now lead the league by eight and one-half games.

Philadelphia took third place away from Washington as old Jack Quinn beat the Senators 3 to 1. Simmons' hitting won the game.

The Tigers jumped to fifth place by nosing out Cleveland, 7 to 6, after scoring five runs in the fifth and knocking Karr out of the box.

Red Lucas of Cincinnati, after holding the Cardinals scoreless for six innings, blew up like a home-made stiff. St. Louis scoring seven runs in the eighth to win 8 to 5. The Cards also pulled off a triple play in the second inning.

Brooklyn lost again to the Giants, 5 to 3, and slipped back into the second division. A homer by Paul Florence, the Giant's rookie catcher, put the game on ice.

The Phils enjoyed a roman holiday by swamping the Braves 13 to 7 Jim Wilson, Philly catcher, got five hits in five times at bat.

High Life Beat Mickey Walker

Friends Claim Mickey Lost His Crown In The Cabarets Before Latzo Made The Divorce Official At Scranton.

(By Davis J. Walsh).

New York, May 27.—Mickey Walker's loss of the welterweight title to Pete Latzo came as a great surprise to the dear, old experts and none at all to his ex-friends. The latter claim that Mickey lost his title in the cabarets before Latzo made the divorce quite official and final at Scranton, Pa. Incidentally, he seemed to have lost most of his friends well in advance of this other, and perhaps less important, bereavement.

"High life and the high hat separated Mickey from those who knew and liked him best," was the comment of a former pal.

I am inclined to believe that neither analysis is entirely correct. Walker was not a great hand for dissipation, although it is true that he enjoyed playing around on Broadway during late years and late hours. As for the high hat, he affected bizarre clothes and seemed to be more reticent than the so-called Smiling Mickey of his earlier career but the writer always found him courteous and unoffensive.

My guess is that Walker simply softened and deteriorated for two reasons: Following Jack Kearns along Broadway and the shellacking he usually was forced to take, win, lose or draw.

In no sense a clever fighter, Walker engaged in many bruising bouts, last summer with Harry Greb and Dave Shade. The former nearly knocked him out and Shade really beat him, only to have the judges pull a trick decision out of the hat.

Incidentally, it may be worthy of comment that Mickey was the second champion within recent months, who played the Broadway game and lost. Greb being the other. The passing of this pair leaves the list of champions with considerably less and probably less natural ability.

This may sound unfair to Latzo and Tiger Flowers but even their friends cannot deny that neither could have beaten the men they dethroned when the latter were good.

Latzo was coming up. Walker going down. They met, en route, and Mickey found he didn't have enough to laugh the thing off. Furthermore, he sold his title cheaply. He took only $30,000 for the Scranton "shoe," so confident was he of winning.

Meantime, a proposed quarter of a million match with Benny Leonard evaporated into thin air, to say nothing of title fights with Dundee, Harmon, Zivic and others.

FOURTH STRAIGHT GAME FOR VICTORY EAGLES

In a stubbornly contested game Tuesday night at McVey's Field the Victory Eagles defeated the Triangles by a 5-2 score.

Hafer pitching for the Eagles allowed but five hits, two of which came in the sixth inning, giving the Triangles their only two tallies. Of the men that faced Hafer nine went down by the strikeout route.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA FAVORED TO WIN

Cambridge, Mass., May 27.—The I. C. 4-A track title, according to the consensus of opinion is due for a transcontinental journey after Friday and Saturday's intercollegiate meet. Either University of Southern California, California or Stanford will be the winner, probably the former. So goes the dope.

There are two things which might defeat Southern California: New England's delightful spring weather, and a set of hurdlers.

A first and third last year went to Leighton Dye and Ronald Stover. Reynolds, a freshman last year is the newest addition to the tall timber-toppers. He set a new Pacific Coast record 14.8, at Palo Alto last week—as good a mark as any western hurdler has stopped this season.

World's Telephones

The eve of the quasi-centennial of the invention of the telephone finds 13,000,000 telephones in the United States, or 61 per cent of all in the world, writes Theodore Gary in the Saturday Evening Post. This country has six per cent of the world's population, so it really outranks the rest of the world ten to one in the matter of telephones. This is not altogether due to government ownership as most other countries. There were special reasons for speedy development in the United States.

Yanks at Crisis Of 1926 Career

Real Test Next Week For Yankees when They Go On First Extended Trip—Four Straight Needed To Establish New Record.

(By Davis J. Walsh).

New York, May 27.—Maybe you can't sit on the band wagon and blow a bag pipe; maybe you can't be a sourball in a box of bonbons. But the writer will give it the good, old college try by stating that the New York Yankees today are at the crisis of their 1926 career.

This rather melancholy statement may not abide with the fact that they have just finished the winning of sixteen straight ball games, the greatest effort the major leagues have known in ten years. Still it is also a fact that they have finished with the Boston Red Sox.

The Yankees have been riding the macadam, so far. We will now have the Belgian blocks, starting tomorrow and finishing on or about July 1, and no sooner. The real bumps will begin next week when the Yanks go out on the road for their first extended trip and stay out for a matter of twenty eight days, which is a long time to wander around loose.

If the Yanks stand up under the punishment they are certain to get between now and July 1. It will be time to begin estimating wear and tear on the turnstiles during the 1926 world series. However, some of the boys here have thought enough to go into this matter rather thoroughly, even at this premature moment.

They have taken the pennant for granted and are concerning themselves with the vision of that winning streak being carried on to a new record. Perhaps it will. To beat the American League record of nineteen straight, made by the 1906 White Sox, all the Yankees will have to do is sustain their streak through four more games. I can't help it that these games happen to be with the Athletics and Senators.

This pair, as a matter of fact, mark the end of the macadam. They will be taken on at the Yankee Stadium, where twelve games of the winning stream were absorbed, and this may help. But, as for sustaining the streak, the Yankees will be doing very well if they win three of the five games scheduled.

First three games in Cleveland, then four in Detroit, four in St. Louis and four in Chicago, after which there is a long jump to Washington for a single game, then another one to Boston for a five game series. This concluded, the Yanks will pass through New York again and land in Philadelphia for a two game series.

The schedule was unduly kind to the Yanks at the start of the season but breaks of that kind even up in the long run, to say nothing of the short run. Of course, the west may have no terrors for the club in view of the fact that that section failed to win a game at the Stadium. But the home grounds are a great comfort to a young club and the Yanks can take everything along except that.

Pioneer Vets in Annual Reunion

Third Annual Event Held at Golden Rule Inn Wednesday Evening—Officers Elected, Fine Menu Served and Jolly Time Enjoyed.

The third—and best—annual reunion of the Pioneer Veterans of F-51 was held Wednesday evening at Golden Rule Inn at Ulster Park and following the business session and election of officers, a banquet was served in the dining hall at which a fine musical program was rendered by Harry Maisenhelder's orchestra.

The officers elected were: President, Peter Keresman; first vice president, Edward Wortman; second vice president, Albert Salzmann; secretary, Eugene Cornwell; treasurer, Martin Mooney; historian, Benjamin Bleitzhofer; sergeant-at-arms, Henry Munch. All of the officers were re-elected for their fourth term with the exception of historian who is now serving his first term.

The reports of the officers showed that the association was in a flourishing condition.

The Banquet.

Following the business session the Pioneer Vets adjourned to the dining hall where the following fine menu was faultlessly served:

Planthaver—Sweet Mixed Pickles
Colligan—Stuffed Olives
Petite Marmite—a La-Mooney
Munch—Filet of Sole
Keresman—Roast Philadelphia Capon
Bush—New Asparagus Butter Sauce
Brooks—Lima Beans
Potatoes Rissoli—a La Cornwell
Barber—Hearts of Lettuce with Dressing
Salzmann—Ice Cream
Bleitzhofer—Coffee-Tea
Wortman—Cigars-Cigarettes

Those Immortal Words.

On the official program for the evening Albert Salzmann was listed as toastmaster, and after the last good thing on the menu had been stowed under the vests of the diners he arose in his seat at the head of the table and rendered those immortal words which have been given by practically every after dinner speaker since the art was first perfected. They were: "Gentlemen, I am too full for utterance." Then he did a remarkable thing, for instead of following the usual procedure and speaking for half an hour he called upon the members to rise and led them in singing some of the old time songs such as "Over There" and "How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning."

Then instead of the usual after dinner speaking the evening was devoted to the singing of the old and new songs, even "Horses" was trotted out.

Bleitzhofer's Appetite.

Historian Bleitzhofer celebrated his election to office by disposing of three generous helpings of chicken, a dish of potatoes, five cups of coffee, three and a half bottles of ginger ale, a plate of bread, several servings of lima beans and "what have you?" As a comrade remarked, "I have learned what ended the war when it did; Germany heard that Brother Bleitzhofer was headed for Berlin and if he gets there, there will be nothing left for us Germans to eat and they promptly threw up their hands."

The Genial Trio.

Brothers Bleitzhofer, Schuyler Kain and Steve Cramer formed a trio and rendered some of the latest steps that would put a Charleston expert to shame and sang a number of the old time songs in a manner that brought down the house.

With Harry Maisenhelder at the piano, the boys could not call for any song, old or new, that he was not ready to play and he did it without having to have the music before him, either.

Martin Mooney's New Lid.

One of the hits of the evening was Treasurer Martin Mooney's new lid, a cute little paper derby hat. In fact, all of the diners were supplied with paper hats, but the one awarded to Comrade Mooney was distinctly "it."

Before the reunion was brought to a close a rising vote of thanks was extended to the host of Golden Rule Inn for the fine banquet that had been prepared and also to Mr. Maisenhelder and his orchestra for the part they had played in making the reunion the best ever held by the association.

The trip to and from the inn was made in automobiles.

A man that has simplicity, honesty, truthfulness, purity and charity, whether he is rich or poor, is prosperous.—Ellery Ward Stanton.

HIGHLAND.

Highland, May 27.—On Wednesday evening, May 19, Mrs. Earnestine Stewart of New York city, the state councilor of Daughters of America, made her official visit to Ida McKinley Council of this place. There was an attendance of nearly 150, with delegations from Kingston, Saugerties and Poughkeepsie. Mrs. J. Graham is councilor and the work of the order was put on very nicely—of seating officers and degree team work—under the direction of D. H. Kurtz, drill master, and decorations under the supervision of Mrs. Sheeley and her corps of able assistants, which was emblematic of the order and very beautiful. Music, under the direction of Mrs. Philip Schantz, was all that could be desired, also vocal selections by herself and Mrs. H. Coutant were appreciated. The refreshment committee, Mrs. J. R. Seaman and Mrs. Walter Constable, supplied the inner man's wants very creditably and the council received no end of favorable commendation and unstinted praise on all sides. They were glad to know their efforts were appreciated, and they will continue in the future as in the past to furnish live wire meetings. Mrs. Stewart, S. C., and Mrs. R. H. Decker, N. R., and past state councilor, were received and deputies, Mrs. Terpening D. S. C. of Sunshine Council; Mrs. Decker, D. S. C. of Moll Pitcher of Poughkeepsie. Mrs. Snow, D. S. C. of Ida McKinley, could not be present on account of an engagement in New York city. Mrs. Stewart won the esteem of all. She gave very interesting accounts of the work through the state and gave many matters of importance. At the conclusion of the talk Mrs. R. H. Decker approached the rostrum and in her usual jolly manner presented to her, in behalf of the council, a gift of gold, which was responded to in a most feeling manner. There were remarks from members of other councils. After refreshments were served there was a general jollification. Every detail of the meeting was well planned and successfully carried out. Floral decorations were beautiful and everything was in keeping with colors of the American flag.

Too Great Tendency to Magnify Trouble

A young man heard a lecturer say: "Of all voracious reptiles the 'catastrophe' is most dangerous; a man rarely dies an hour if bitten by one."

Later the young man went fishing. He clambered along a shore rock wall, his rod pointing ahead of him, his bait silent upon the water. Presently a catastrophe dropped into the stream before him; then another and another. He paid no attention, for he was used to catastrophe. He grasped with his left hand in the briars and vines, to hold himself on the ledge. Suddenly something writhed into view. Two glittering orbs fixed blood. Then the biggest catastrophe he had ever seen unrolled from the vines above him.

Cold sweat broke over the young man. His head throbbed. He felt the pulses leave in his veins, paralyze his nerves. He decided to leap into the stream rather than suffer the slow death now coming. He poised to do it when a fish struck his bait. His rod went to the fighting pull of a great bass. Instinctively he thrilled to the battle—the dogging thrill of the fisherman when "a big one" hits the fly.

He landed the bass after an hour, glutted over the big fighting fish, then remembered his head. It didn't throb any more. He took courage to prove the pleasant wonder. In each of them he found—a bass, shorn of its monstrous nettle!

Which only means that imagination can drown men to death; does drown many to failure. Pricked by a nettle, they imagine they have been bitten by the catastrophe; dooming a little trouble they imagine it fatal.

Don't let imagination enlarge your troubles. Turn it on the other way, making it enlarge your power to meet troubles and overcome them. Most troubles are nettles, not catastrophes.—Milwaukee Journal.

Empire Eggs

More than sixty million eggs reached England from South Africa during the last quarter of 1925 in "new-laid" condition.

Verdict Favors City of Kingston

Jury Returns Verdict of No Cause of Action in Phoebe Cobb Case Against City for Injuries Sustained in Fall.

A verdict in favor of the city of Kingston was returned Wednesday afternoon in Supreme court in an action brought by Phoebe Cobb against the city to recover damages for injuries sustained when she fell on an alleged icy walk at the corner of Prospect and Henry streets in 1922. Mrs. Cobb sought to recover for a broken arm sustained at that time. The jury returned a verdict of no cause of action.

N. H. Fessenden by F. C. Merritt appeared for the plaintiff and Corporation Counsel Jenkins and William Kaercher appeared for the city.

Relics of Bronze Age Unearthed in England

On a long slope of seemingly virgin turf between the famous hills of Cissbury and Chanctonbury, Sussex, England, archeologists have unearthed a site, abounding in evidences of occupation, of what is known as a late Bronze age village. Everywhere are the signs of a peaceful, cultured homestead, pastoral, yet with many of the luxuries of life brought about by 400 years of Roman civilization, and with every sign of this is a sign of the destruction wrought by the Saxon invader. The ground is littered with the Roman tiles, the Roman tile nails, fragments of walls that were once covered in the Roman manner with colored distemper. Here, in what was obviously the rubbish pit, fragments put together make up a perfect specimen of a wine cup of the classic red Samian ware, delicately ornamented with a pattern that originally came from classic Greece. Here are fragments of the great amphorae used by Romans for importing wine. It should be noted that pots made by these vanished Bronze age people and the earliest of the Celts would not stand fire, so to cook their food they heated flint stones and threw them into the water until it boiled. It is a trick of savages to this day. Once the turf is removed the soil of the downs about these villages is strewn all over with millions of flint stones bearing unmistakable signs of having been made red hot and then plunged into water.

Alterations Are Made in Course of Years

Most people would think that the word admiral is a typical English expression. Its origin, however, is Emir el Bagh, which is Arabic for "Lord of the sea." The term captain comes to us direct from the Latin caput, meaning head.

The coxwain was originally the man who pulled the after-oar of the captain's boat, then known as the "cock's boat." Cock-boat itself is a corruption of the word coracle, a small round boat used for fishing. Commodore is nothing more than the Italian commendatore, or commander.

Frequently we hear about "Davy Jones." There was, of course, no such person, but should you speak of "Duffy Jonah's Locker," you have the original phrase. Duffy is the West-Indian negro term for the spirit of Jonah.

The term "dog watch" is a corruption of "dodge" watch, the "dodge" being an arrangement to prevent men from being on duty every day at the same hours.

Restoring Old Castles

Ancient Durham castle, in England, is disintegrating. The foundations of this historic pile were laid in the year 1072 by Waltheof, earl of Northumbria a favorite of William the Conqueror. The earl was appointed to the bishopric, and Durham castle became the home of a succession of bishops each of whom left his own additions and impress upon the castle. Towers, doorways, chapels, kitchens were added by historic characters who were owners of the castle during the succeeding years, and all have left their names upon the pages of British history. Public subscriptions are supplementing the £15,000 set apart by the Durham city fathers, and public sentiment is being aroused, looking forward to the preservation and restoration of this historic building, which is still in active use as a college.

Northern Ohio Indians

The Erie, for whom the lake was named, were at one time the occupants of northeastern Ohio, as well as of the whole southern shore of Lake Erie from near the site of Buffalo to Sandusky bay. They were kin of the Iroquois, but bitter enemies, and it seems that about 1650 a merciless war broke out between them. The Iroquois were superior in numbers and organization, with the result that they practically exterminated the Erie nation, a few remnants of it being received into other tribes. The lands of the Erie were then left largely in possession of the Iroquois. They were also occupied to some extent by three western nations — Ottawas, Chippewas and Pottawattomies.

Strong demand the country over for Chrysler cars has followed two significant Chrysler announcements made recently. One is of reductions from $50 to $200 in prices of the famous Chrysler "70" which has been followed by a flood of additional orders for this car from all parts of the country. The output of Chrysler "70" models will have to be still further increased to take care of the demand.

OLD NEGRO SINGING NOW SELDOM HEARD

Lovers of Music Keenly Regret Its Passing.

Some of the most cherished traditions of the old South are fast being lost by the new South. The "spirituals" and unmatched harmony in the old plantation songs of the negro are fast becoming extinct. Industrial progress is blamed by music critics for this and other changed conditions among the negro race.

The large plantations of the South were once the homes of the chief negro musicians. Now the best musicians of that race, it is pointed out, are to be found in the large cities and centers of population, and many of these have acquired cultural attainments which have detracted from the old songs. One must go far into the state of Alabama now to find negro singing that even approximates the harmony that once existed over the entire South.

Tuskegee institute is making a big effort to preserve and retain the old negro songs. That institute is trying to preserve to both the white and negro races the spirit songs originated by the latter. It has produced some of the finest negro singers. During the past school year its glee club presented interpretations of negro songs of other days which were said to be as nearly perfect as reproduction could be made. Fisk and Hampton, other famous negro schools, have also given serious endeavor along similar lines.

It is claimed that one who has never heard the "cotton-patch harmony" cannot appreciate what it would mean to music lovers if this art should pass. Music critics have traveled far to hear negro harmony in its original setting. They claim that fifty negroes of varied ages in a cotton field are capable of producing an impromptu program of song, chant, whistling and chatter that can be found nowhere else on earth.

A true negro song is one that was never written. They do not have to know a song to join in with their fellows in singing it. Each farm group has a leader, usually a man, the rest follow in. The same song may be sung for an hour or all day, but it never grows monotonous because of its variations. Some negro singers can ring in more notes than have ever been written in the staff. They sing in major, minor and unknown "keys." There are no precedents for what they sing. But no matter what they sing there is nearly always an indescribable rhythm, swing and motion in it which, according to one critic, is as "harmonious as the flow of a meadow brook." The oldtime negro singers know nothing of written music, but they know harmony.—Pathfinder Magazine.

May Restore Old Theater

The theater of Marcellus is a famous ruin in Rome. The theater was commenced by Julius Cæsar and completed by Augustus, by whom it was dedicated to Marcellus in 13 B. C. It had a seating capacity of 30,000, and resembled in its exterior the Coliseum, which was probably modeled after it. The theater of Marcellus was several times injured and restored during the empire, and in 1082 was converted into a fortress. In 1360 it came into the possession of the Savelli family, which retained it until their extinction in 1712, when it was purchased by the Orsini family, the present owners. Little of the original building remains, except the arcades, which are now used as shops. The restoration of the theater of Marcellus is one of the projects of Mussolini, who has announced his purpose of restoring Rome to the grandeur it once knew.—Kansas City Star.

Shoes and Cars

One of the latest occupations against the automobile comes from the shoe trade. Makers of shoes say that the proportional decline in the shoe business since the war is due largely to the increased use of the automobile. Especially noticeable is this decline in the rural districts, where one people formerly walked short distances rather than hitch up and drive. Now a car ready at the door takes them to the village or the city. Likewise, the farmer often walked beside his horses when big loads were hauled. The man or woman who did not have "work" shoes and also "Sunday" shoes was scarce. Now the farmer finds that one pair at a time does him quite well.

America's Royal Visitors Arrive

New York, May 27.—Facing a battery of news cameras and the eager questions of assembled reporters, the Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden, America's royal visitors, smiled their appreciation of the enthusiastic welcome accorded them when their vessel, the Swedish-American Liner Gripsholm, arrived at quarantine today.

The royal couple expressed themselves as delighted with their reception and said that the principal object of their visit is "to learn America's characteristics."

The Prince confided to newspapermen that he did not drink, smoke, play poker nor charleston, but added, smilingly, that he was willing to learn poker and charleston.

The Princess said that she loved dancing and adored American Jazz. "In Sweden," said Princess Louise, "American Jazz is used exclusively for dancing. I do not dance the charleston but I hope to learn it while I am in America."

ROAD BUILDING

BIG JOB DONE ON MINNESOTA ROADS

To transport the surfacing materials used by the Minnesota department of highways during the years 1921 to 1925, inclusive—beginning when the new state highway program took full effect—would require 3,228 trains of steel hopper cars extending a distance of 1,541 miles. Charles M. Babcock, chief of the department, in a recent statement, said that the department has built 8,575 miles of gravel surfacing and 575 miles of paving in addition to extensive bridge construction and replacement and maintenance operations over the entire 7,000-mile highway system.

Material involved in the state highway department's surfacing activities during the five-year period mentioned totaled 6,704,000 cubic yards of dry materials, or 9,684,000 tons. To transport this vast quantity would have required 193,680 steel hopper cars of a capacity of 50 tons each.

The department built 575 miles of pavement and there entered into it 1,847,000 cubic yards of material, or a quantity sufficient to construct a wall 472 miles long, 10 feet high and 2 feet thick. This wall would extend from St. Paul to Winnipeg.

The department has used for various purposes 852,963 tons of cement, 834,428 tons of sand and 1,835,086 tons of aggregate—gravel or crushed rock. The cement, gravel and crushed rock entered not only into paving but construction of bridges and culverts. Altogether there were 82,581,000 cubic feet of dry materials, and these made 1,362,000 cubic yards of concrete.

All this work was on the state-wide system of trunk highways serving by one or more routes all county seats and nearly all towns of more than 1,000 population. Placed end to end these routes would make an oval line around the outside of the entire United States and the improved mileages would cross it once on both its shortest and longest diameters.

Bridges Very Important in Any Highway System

Bridges are a necessity to the highway system of the world. But bridges may be detrimental to a degree, as well as helpful, says Good Roads. Bridges may be classed in several groups; the long and the multi-span bridge over rivers; the single span short bridge over creeks and drainage systems; the small single span bridges over culverts; all bridges, but of varying construction and design.

Very little criticism may be found in the long multi-span bridges, such as are found over our larger streams. The motorist will naturally slow up when approaching such a structure, as he can see it and will take the necessary precautions to pass over it safely. Such mechanical details as approaches, road width, visibility on approach are, as a general rule, pretty well taken care of. There are fewer accidents by far on a bridge of this type than on the small, half-hidden, narrow bridge, such as lines our highway system at intervals of every few hundred feet.

The small creek bridge and the culvert bridge both offer hazards to the traveler that are both unnecessary and preventable, many of these small bridges, being of a width much too narrow for the modern highway. The abutments, or bridge rails, will extend as much as two and often three feet into the road right of way.

Highway to Science

An important new development in highway engineering is the certainty with which it can be determined just when traffic reaches the point where a paved road will be more economical than a dirt or gravel road. It is now even possible to determine even the type of pavement and the design which will give the taxpayers and the highway users the best value.

Good Roads Facts

Good roads bring rich returns.

A bad road is a big handicap to a good community.

Utah will build 116 miles of road in 1926, according to the state road commission. This construction will cost nearly $1,600,000. The money is largely from the counties supplemented by federal aid.

* * *

Highway construction and maintenance in 1926 will equal and possibly exceed the progress made in any other year, according to estimates from the various states compiled by the United States bureau of public roads.

* * *

The Nevada department of highways has issued a report on the present condition of the Lincoln highway in that state. It shows that 104 miles of the route, practically 80 per cent of the mileage, are complete.

* * *

Boston is planning an extensive system to relieve traffic congestion in the busy downtown district. The plan is to construct several main highways 200 feet wide to take care of the principal automobile traffic. Such a plan would cost the city $50,000,000.

Bar Hoff from Amateur Events

Boston, May 26.—Charles Hoff, the Norwegian pole vaulter and sprinter, today was barred from future competition in amateur athletics in this country.

W. C. Prout, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the A. A. U. announced that the committee had voted not to grant Hoff any further permit to engage in athletic events under the supervision of the A. A. U.

Hoff had been under investigation, among the charges was one in regard to Hoff's expense accounts.

The Pacific Coast Association of the A. A. U. in resolutions demanded that Hoff be barred on the ground that he refused to enter the May 15th meet at San Francisco after he had signed the entry list. Hoff claimed he had not been given sufficient notice of the meet.

80 Mine Workers Reported Trapped

Wilkes Barre Pa., May 27.—Eighty mine workers were reported trapped behind a fire that is raging in the Mt. Lookout Mine of the Temple Coal Company at Wyoming, today

Five workers managed to fight their way through the flames. One of them is in a serious condition, but the others are expected to recover.

The fire broke out near the foot of the shaft. It started in the 'Boss's shanty and hospital, spreading with lightning speed. Workers in the eleven-foot vein tried to extinguish the flames in vain, but it soon was raging beyond control.

Financial and Commercial

New York, May 27.—Industrial stocks sold at moderately higher prices today in response to a considerable increase in buying demand from sources outside of Wall Street, and which from all accounts represented the return of many investors and public traders to the market.

The Standard and independent oil stocks on both boards also attracted considerable speculative buying.

Stocks of the public utility companies, the coppers, sugars, tobaccos and a few of the railroad shares gained higher price levels in a firm but comparatively inactive market in the fourth hour. Consolidated Gas and Brooklyn Union Gas received the benefit of favorable comments from directors. American Smelting and Cerro De Pasco led the copper stocks and United States Rubber the tire stocks.

A belated rise in the Missouri Pacific Railroad stocks carried the common to 34½ and the preferred to 85½, up nearly 3 points. New Haven was also a leader in the speculative rails, while New York, Chicago & St. Louis, and other of the so-called Van Sweringen rails sold slightly higher. Texas & Pacific resumed its forward movement and New York Central sold fractionally higher.

Society Notes

Birthday Celebrated.

Wednesday night the members of the Sewing Circle of Trinity Lutheran Church of Spring street were the guests of their president, Mrs. William Pretzsch, on the occasion of her birthday and met in the parsonage. It was a surprise for the members, for as a rule the meetings are held in the basement of the church. After all had enjoyed the real old-fashioned kaffe-klatsch, or coffee social, heartiest congratulations were tendered Mrs. Pretzsch for her royal treat and surprise. But greater was the surprise given to the host in the form of a substantial purse to purchase a rug for the dining room. Mrs. Pretzsch very feelingly thanked the kind members. The following members were present: Mrs. Fred Albright, Mrs. Carl Baer, Sr., Mrs. Frieda Bailey, Miss Augusta Bug, Mrs. William Ellsworth, Mrs. Richard Erteit, Mrs. Fred Ewel, Mrs. Henry Geisel, Mrs. Mary Gill, Mrs. Louise Finningan, Mrs. Barbara Fox, Mrs. John Hauck, Mrs. Agnes Heldron, Mrs. Frank Koeppen, Mrs. Rud Krueger, Mrs. Peter Kullmann, Mrs. August Marks, Mrs. John Remus, Sr., Mrs. George J Schmidt, Mrs. William Van Keuren, Mrs. Augusta Vizoskie, and Mrs. William Walter.

Odds and Ends

A meeting of the Newman Club will be held at the K. of C. building on Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Wurts Street Baptist Church will meet Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. William B. Hutton, 297 Hasbrouck avenue. Mrs. Harry Tremper will have charge of the program. All ladies of the church are invited to attend.

About the Folks

Morris Kaplan, the furniture dealer, who has been confined to his home on Main street for ten days by reason of neuritis, is able to be about again for a time each day.

CHARLES RUSSELL NOT ALLOWED TO LAND HERE.

Plymouth, England, May 27.—Charles Edward Russell, twice socialist candidate for governor of New York and commissioner to Great Britain for the United States Committee on public information during the World War, was today denied permission to land here from the President Roosevelt.

No explanation was given by the immigration authorities for their refusal to permit Russell to land, but it was understood that it was on account of his socialistic writings.

Russell continued to Cherbourg where he will disembark.

ARREST ALLEGED PALS OF MURDERED ATTORNEY

Chicago, May 27.—Miles and James "Klondyke" O'Donnell, reputed companions of Assistant States Attorney William H. McSwiggin and two others when the trio was slain by a machine gun attack in Cicero about a month ago, today were arrested by a detective squad just half a mile from the scene of the killings.

Their arrest is regarded by officers as the most promising and practically the first real development in the efforts to fix responsibility for the slayings.

"Barefoot Boy" Still Lives

The original "Barefoot Boy," referred to by John Greenleaf Whittier in his immortal poem, still has his "cheek of tan." He is Francis D. Marston, who as a boy was employed by the poet, and who still works about the Whittier estate in Danvers, Mass.

Many years ago, when little Frankie Marston picked blueberries and gathered up the fallen leaves about Whittier's farm, Oak Knoll, his poet friend was inspired by the youth's bare feet, his turned-up trousers, his cheek of tan and his merry whistle tunes.

Though Marston now has aged and wears a full beard he still enjoys taking off his shoes and going barefooted when he journeys through the moss-carpeted woodlands. Throughout his life he has lived in the open and beneath his beard still may be seen the "cheek of tan" which helped inspire Whittier.

Growing Scalp Skin

To grow new skin on a damaged scalp, an Illinois doctor has resurrected the method of boring slight holes into the skull with a bone drill. This method was used back in 1777 by a Philadelphia doctor named Vance who had a patient who had been scalped by Indians. His wound had all healed, except the middle portion which was bare bone, and which showed no signs of improving. Vance took a shoemaker's awl and bored numerous holes through the outer table of the skull. He quit boring when a reddish fluid appeared. In his account of the case following operation, he said that "after a time proud flesh appeared to rise in these holes," and he further stated that the wound "then over skinned."—New York World.

YOUTH POISONED BECAUSE OF HIS POPULARITY

Pensacola, Fla., May 27.—"Archie was too popular with the girls. That's why I poisoned him." Nelly Odom, 18, is said to have told police authorities here today following his arrest on a charge of murder in connection with the fatal poisoning of Archie Alexander, 17.

The murder charge was made against the youth following a coroner's inquiry and a preliminary hearing before a committing magistrate.

Young Odom confessed to the magistrate that he had offered a bottle of liquor containing strychnine to the Alexander boy because he was jealous of the latter's alleged popularity with local members of the fair sex. He testified however, that he was not alone in his act and named a girl and her father as those who assisted him.

According to authorities the girl and her father were the strongest witnesses against Odom. Both boys involved were connected with two of the lead ng families of this county.

Girl Scouts Make Appeal for Funds

Letters Out for the Girl Scout Fund for Ulster County—Shacks Needed to Replace Tents—Some of the Scout Activities.

This year instead of a regular "Drive," the Ulster County Council of Girl Scouts felt that they had enough good friends in the county to whom they could send letters, telling them of the need of funds to carry on the work throughout the county for the year and to make the necessary repairs and enlargements in the camp.

Scouting means a great deal to the girls of Ulster county all the year round. Through the long winter months their weekly meetings keep them happy and contented and learning many things. Then in the summer they have Camp Wendy where they work, frolic and learn, while the good outdoor activities put them in trim for school the next fall.

A full time director of Scout activities is carried, whose duties include the supervision of Scout work throughout the entire county. This all costs money. While the commissioner, Mrs. Halliday, has been most generous in furnishing the camp site on her estate at Wallkill, and helps in untold ways with the upkeep of the camp, there are constant repairs and replacements which must be made.

This year, many of the tents have proved too worn to be repaired, so shacks, well screened, are to be built to take the place of the tents. The shacks will not cost as much as a tent and will be more lasting. A great need has been felt of a recreation hall for use on rainy or cold days. This recreation hall is to be added to the dining hall, Peter Pan. And this costs money.

In every way, each year the Council tries to obtain the best counselors and leaders for the girls, and through all sorts of contacts, the work is slowly but steadily growing. Old friends are back of this work and will respond to the appeal for funds, and the Scouts want any new and unknown friends to feel that they also need their help. If anyone is a new friend and did not receive a letter, they are asked to put into an envelope whatever amount they feel they can give and send it at once to Mrs. George Halliday, Commissioner, Wallkill, New York.

Three hundred dollars will cover expenses for the year, camp repair and all. Thus far in its history the organization has never had a deficit and asks help to maintain that standard.

EASY AND GOOD DESSERTS

Milk, the best food suited to children, makes the best foundation for wholesome desserts, good for old as well as young and easy of digestion.

Baked Custard.—This custard may be varied by different flavors or seasoning so that even if often served it will not become monotonous. Beat four eggs slightly, add one-half cupful of sugar and one quart of fresh milk. Cook in water in a hot oven. Add a pinch of salt and such seasoning as grated nutmeg, cinnamon or any desired flavoring extract. All egg mixtures should cook at a low temperature, so setting the custard in water and not allowing it to boil will keep the custard cooking at a lower temperature. To test when cooked, dip a knifeblade into the center of the custard; if it comes out clean the custard is done. Remove at once from the oven and hot water. Custard that is overcooked is watery and unattractive.

Caramel Custard.—Melt in a smooth omelet pan one-half cupful of sugar, add gradually four cupfuls of scalding hot water and stir until the caramel is dissolved. Beat five eggs, add one-half teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of vanilla, strain into a mold rinsed in cold water. Bake as usual.

Ginger Custard.—Line buttered cups with small pieces of canton ginger, then pour in a thick custard, using four eggs to a pint of milk, one-third of a cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt and vanilla to flavor. Beat the eggs, add sugar, salt, and flavoring, strain into molds and set into hot water to bake until firm. Serve with a spoonful of canton ginger sirup and a little of the chopped ginger over the unmolded custard when cold.

The more eggs used in a custard the more nourishing the dessert; however one may prepare a very good custard using two eggs to a pint of milk. If baking is not convenient steam the custards in water over a low flame on the gas burner. Cover for a while, then watch carefully so as not to overcook.

Why Most People Fail

Most people fail because they stop too soon. When odds are against them they lose faith in themselves—they have not the courage to fight obstacles that seem insurmountable. Men cannot think failure and win success.

HOWE ABOUT—

By ED HOWE

(Copyright by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

There is a great amount of useful education in the world. Acquire it and you may live more comfortably, usefully, easily, more successfully. Why not, therefore, aim to acquire this useful education from month to month, year to year, day to day, as you find time for education? Why neglect it when you have spare time? Why engage in foolish, annoying arguments or missions?

I know a woman who must be in the neighborhood of sixty. She never could sing and could not be taught, but has "kept up her music" until the present and shows no signs of quitting. . . . That's the trouble with art: it has so many enthusiastic lady followers who have no real appreciation of art, no judgment, no ability. And they talk as though they were old Missus Art herself. . . . If a man of similar ability should keep up his singing to sixty and beyond, the other men would make violent fun of him; usually they save him long before he is sixty.

But it's different with a woman. I heard the editor of a local paper say that he was compelled to write a "good notice" for the singing of old Missus Art and that the prospect sickened him.

A writing man says: "Let the sheep-like crowd take the risks of its docility." . . . A good deal to think about in this.

Goethe wrote good things, but hid them away in piles of rubbish so big that I, for one, will not wade through them.

An Indiana doctor writes me he does not believe Henry Ford can read and think as the average man does.

Henry Ford is the intimate friend of Thomas A. Edison. These two men take vacations together, sleep in the same tent, sit around the same camp fire and exchange views.

You may depend upon it, Mr. Edison would not spend his little idle time with a man who cannot read and think.

The smartest man I ever knew might have made the "break" Henry Ford is accused of making on the witness stand.

I have forgotten the details; he didn't know what "sic" or "ibid" meant—something like that.

All the same, he is an old fox for smartness.
